The upstairs parlor floor opens to an expansive gallery with 12-foot ceilings. The south-facing living room with a fireplace overlooks the Church of Heavenly Rest. The dining room, which features another fireplace and a bay window that overlooks East 90th Street, is adjacent to a large butler's (service) kitchen.

The third level holds the regal primary suite, with a quiet bedroom, spacious closets, a fireplace, and a solid quartz bathroom. This level also boasts that great pine-paneled library and its fireplace, wet bar, and powder room.

The fourth floor features a media room, set under an elegant skylight, and two en-suite bedrooms. There are two more bedrooms on the fifth floor, along with a cozy lounge and a 450-square-foot south-facing terrace.

Yes—this neighborhood gem is absolutely stunning. And don't forget you're just half a block from Central Park and the Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis Reservoir, a favorite spot for locals and tourists alike.
